

Songbird Hearing Aid: The Disposable Hearing Aid

Posted by Allan Tan 27 July, 2009

Songbird hearing aids are an inexpensive alternative to traditional hearing aids. These hearing aids are designed for people with mild to moderate hearing loss.

Unlike other hearing aids, Songbird hearing aids are disposable. The Songbird hearing aid user does not need to buy hearing aid batteries or pay for repairs, cleaning, or maintenance. When the hearing aid battery is no longer working, the user throws the hearing aid away and gets a new one.

Many hearing aids on the market cost thousands of dollars. The Songbird hearing aids cost about eighty dollars each. It can be ideal for people who do not have the money or insurance to pay for a traditional hearing aid.

Songbird often offers a free trial offer for new Songbird hearing aid users. The new customer only needs to pay for the shipping and handling fee to get a free Songbird hearing aid.

Songbird hearing aids do not require a doctor's office visit for a professional fitting like most other hearing aids. Songbird hearing aids are an adjustable behind-the-ear model, so the hearing aid users can adjust the fit themselves.

Songbird hearing aids were invented by the company that invented HDTV. The Songbird hearing aid produces quality sound with the use of digital components. The sound quality of Songbird hearing aids is considered comparable to traditional hearing aids.

Songbird hearing aid batteries last about four hundred hours of use. The foil packaging for new hearing aids should not be torn or opened until the hearing aid user is ready to use it. Exposure to air activates the battery, so it should remain sealed in the package to avoid the premature activation of the battery.

The hearing aid user should avoid storing hearing aids in humid or hot areas. Songbird hearing aids should be turned off between uses to make the hearing aid battery last as long as possible.

Someone interested in purchasing a Songbird hearing aid can order one through their toll free number or on the website. Hearing aid users can save on shipping costs by signing up for automatic delivery.